

I find it very disturbing that Sinclair owned stations around the country are being ordered to preempt regular programming several days before the presidential election in order to air the anti-John Kerry film, Stolen Honor. This abuse of the airways to pursue a political agenda is highly offensive. Are such smear pieces allowed to be aired without a presentation of the opposing viewpoint? Whatever happened to fairness in media? This is something that needs examination.

I wish to voice my disgust with this situation and to suggest to you that a film such as Going Upriver or Undercover: The Whole Truth About Iraq be required to be aired to support the opposite view of Stolen Honor. It is the 'honorable' thing to do.

thank you
